

1st HenU / INFER Workshop on Applied Macroeconomics

March 18th to 19th 2015

Ever since the outbreak of the global financial crisis after Lehman Brothers filed bankruptcy in September 2008, central banks across the globe have reacted with an unprecedented expansion of money supply. The profession is split on the assessment of those policies. While many deem it a necessary response that prevented a second great recession, other believe that the loose monetary was the fundamental reason behind the crisis in the first place and warn that new bubbles on the international asset markets have already started. Therefore, the empirical analysis of monetary policy, decision making of central banks, international impacts of monetary policy, and the accurate measurement of assessment of the indicators that drive the money market are more important than ever before.

On March 19th and 20th 2015 the School of Economics of Henan University (HenU) and the International Network for Economic Research (INFER) will devote their first joint workshop on applied macroeconomics to those and related issues. All submissions on applied macroeconomics will be considered, but submissions on those issues are especially encouraged.
